

- i) A suitable location and sufficient space for the future electric hot water system(s) to meet the hot water demand of the residents. This must meet all current Australian Standards for electrical and plumbing installation.
- ii) The existing capacity of the electrical switchboard can meet the electrical demand of the future hot water systems.
- iii) Appropriate electrical cabling is in situ from the existing electrical switchboard to the future electric hot water systems.